

E-newsletter 5

14 December 2020

Io Saturnalia and welcome to our fifth Roman Army School E-newsletter!

We are rounding off the year having hosted our first ever online talk held on the 1st December. In a delightful session with few technical hiccups David Breeze presented to those assembled a wonderful lecture on the evidence for life in Bearsden Fort. Thank you to all those who did manage to attend we are grateful that you came along, asked questions and gave us some much appreciated feedback. For those who were unable to attend the lecture live on the night we now have a link available so that anyone who would like to may watch the lecture. Check that out here:

We also have a brief article on armour and the archaeology of battle sites from one of our organisers – John Harding, please see the attached article to read.

Also attached is a new discount code valid until 28th February for BAR series books – perfect for last minute Christmas gifts or for starting the New Year.

We have a new article on our website by Jorit Wintjes 'A Roman base on the Kapellenberg – the Roman fortress in Marktbreit, Franconia.' It is loaded with pictures and definitely worth a read <https://www.ad43.org.uk/blog/a-roman-base-on-the-kapellenberg-the-roman-fortress-in-marktbreit-franconia/> Don't forget that you can leave questions and comments on all of our blog posts!

Elsewhere Jstor is expanding its open community collections and up to date list of what is available is located here: <https://about.jstor.org/open-community-collections/>

And the Roman Society have added a new lecture to their youtube channel 'Rome and the Sea: Rethinking Early Roman History from a Mediterranean Perspective' available here:
